Did you know?

Only female mosquitoes bite humans and animals; they need a blood meal to produce eggs, while male mosquitoes primarily feed on nectar and plant juices.

Mosquitoes, which hibernate over the winter, emerge to lay their eggs – usually in stagnant pools of water – as the temperature approaches 50 degrees Fahrenheit the eggs begin to hatch. The warmer the temperature the faster they hatch. At 50 degrees, mosquitoes can grow from egg to adult in around 40 days, while in temperatures over 77 degrees, it takes just four days for mosquitoes to grow to adulthood.
